THE TWO NOTES

After much agonizing, a woman decided to ask for a pay raise, and told her husband of her plan. Then she went off to work, made her request—and at the end of the day the raise was hers! Overjoyed, she rushed home without first calling her husband.

Yet at home she found the table set with candles and flowers, and her husband busy cooking a wonderful meal. He's come home early to surprise her—she wondered how he knew. When they sat down to eat, she found a note beside her plate: "I knew you could do it! You deserve the best."

After dinner, as her husband took the dishes to the kitchen, a second card fell from his pocket. It read "You'll get that raise next time! You deserve the best!"

That moment she realized what she had had all along—someone who loved her whether she succeeded or failed and who would be there no matter what. ADAPTED FROM "Love Without Measure" by STEVE GOODIER

IN MEMORY OF THOSE WE MISS

When someone dies, you don't get over it
so many lessons,
by forgetting; you get over it by remembering,
which one is of the
and you are aware that no person is ever truly
one of the most
lost or gone once they have been in our life
Nobody will believe
and loved us, as we have loved them.
in yourself.

LOVE

Love has taught me
it's hard to decide
greatest value, but Important is this:
in you unless you believe
